Fetish contest top dog thankful that he's free to be a puppy

Every dog has its day. Winner wore hockey pads, blue underwear and a leather dog mask

JESSICA SMITH
jessica.smith@metronews.ca

Contestants barked, howled and gave speeches at the first-ever National Capital Leather Pride Weekend Pup contest, held at the Centretown Pub.

The contest was similar to the Miss America Pageant — but for people who like to become puppies, dressed up in fetish gear. Contestants were judged in the jock/thong, speech and formal categories.

"Pup play," is an international phenomenon, but has only been organized in Ottawa for the past year, said Mr. Leather Ottawa 2010 Mike Tattersall, who emceed the competition, but isn't a pup himself.

"It's a human expression of freedom and self-expression," said Tattersall. "Imagine a room full of Labrador retriever puppies and the chaos those puppies would do to themselves as they play."

Pups will generally wear leather, rubber or other fetish gear. Some have handlers, others are "strays."

Tattersall organized the competition, which he believes was the first in Ontario and perhaps the first in Canada.

The runner-up was Karl Couture, who came out as a pup for the first time at Pride last year, helping launch Ottawa's pup community.

He spoke about the courage it took to go out in public as a pup during the speech category of the competition.

"Everyone sees us differently, positive, negative, I don't care anymore," he said. "I'm proud to be here and can't wait to see what we'll accomplish."

He had to get over the fear of what would happen to him for coming out as a pup, but now he's glad he did, he said.

The winner, Scout, wore hockey pads, blue underwear and a leather dog mask in the formal wear section of the competition. He gave an emotional speech about seeing Rolph in his full pup gear at Pride, which inspired him to come out as a pup as well.

"I want to say thank you all for allowing me to feel safe and for allowing me to be who I am," he said.

Memories, tears and sacrifice: Dieppe veterans remembered

70 years later.
Hundreds gather Sunday to mark deadly Second World War raid

JESSICA BEDDAOUI
Ottawa@metronews.ca

Jacques Cinq-Mars traded his hospital bed in Montreal for a front-row seat at a ceremony on Sunday to mark the 70th anniversary of the disastrous Dieppe Raid.

"I come every year," the 92-year-old guest of honour said at the Cenotaph. "You feel it in your heart to see people remember."

Before the outbreak of the Second World War in September 1939, Cinq-Mars was studying business at Collège Mont-Saint-Louis in Montreal.

At the age of 20, he enlisted with Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal and, after two and a half years of training, was dispatched to Dieppe.

On Aug. 19, 1942, Cinq-Mars was wounded and captured by the Germans and spent the rest of the war as a prisoner.

"It was very hard, very hard to see my comrades die in front of me. I'm happy and lucky to be alive," he said.

More than 900 Canadians were killed in the Dieppe Raid and nearly 2,500 others were wounded or taken as prisoners of war.

"(Canadians) must know all the sacrifice that was done," Cinq-Mars added.

Danielle Cooper travelled from Brockville so that her three young daughters could meet the veterans and learn from them.

"It's just important that they know the history," Cooper said.

"I know that I have family members that fought in the war. We've been very clear with them about the sacrifices that people have made, so it's important that they see (the veterans) as well."

"Really, the planning for this Dieppe Raid, it wasn't all a bowl of cherries," said Royal Galipeau, the Conservative MP for Ottawa-Orleans.

"There's one thing that's still clear — every Canadian that served in it did it with courage."

Gatineau. Man and woman arrested after balcony shooting

Gatineau police arrested two people in an apartment building on Sunday after someone fired two shots from a fifth-floor balcony.

Several residents of 4 Rue Radisson reported hearing a dispute and two gunshots at about 6 a.m., spokesman Jean-Paul Lemay said.

No injuries were reported and police are still investigating whether the shooter was aiming at a person, or if the shots were related to the dispute, Lemay said.

"We have information there was a dispute, but was it the same apartment?" he said. "It's a challenge. Sound travels. Everyone has a different perception of where sound travels from."

Joanne Law said she was on her balcony at 6 a.m. when she heard the shots. "I don't know where they came from," she said. "I went out to investigate and they wouldn't let me back in." JESSICA SMITH/METRO

Prime destination. ByWard Market to get 're-visioned'

City staff are hiring a New York-based non-profit to "re-vision" the ByWard Market.

A report going before the Planning Committee on Thursday says city staff were directed to undertake a visioning exercise on the future of the market and are hiring Project for Public Spaces at a cost of $38,350 — which will be shared by the ByWard Market Business Improvement Area.

Ward councillor Mathieu Fleury supports the plan.

"It's good to bring someone from the outside who has the expertise," he said.

One of the issues the group will explore is the balance between the market as a food destination and an entertainment destination. But nothing is off the table for discussion, he said.

Another gruesome discovery: More possible remains found

Toronto. On Sunday, a bag containing what appear to be remains is found; second such find in West Highland Creek

A coroner has been called in to examine a bag containing "suspicious" fleshy material discovered Sunday in the same Scarborough creek where possible human remains were found by a homeless man on Saturday.

The discovery was made as Peel police continue to search a park in Mississauga, where body parts were discovered late last week.

A grey plastic bag containing what appeared to be remains of some kind, was found late Sunday morning in the West Highland Creek, near Scarborough's Tam O'Shanter golf course, by a Torstar News Service journalist who was photographing search teams in the area. Police were immediately notified.

The new find was about 100 metres south of the first find, which was near Cardwell Ave. and Kennedy Rd. Police immediately expanded the cordon and brought in dog teams.

"It's certainly suspicious. That's why we've sealed off the area and turned it over to forensics," said Sgt. Doug Minor. Police say they're waiting for the coroner to tell them what the bag contains.

Missouri. Republican senate candidate questions if pregnancy can result from rape

Rep. Todd Akin, Missouri's Republican Senate candidate, has questioned whether women can become pregnant when they're raped.

Akin said in an interview with St. Louis television station KTVI released Sunday that pregnancy from rape is "really rare." A video of the interview is posted on the station's website.

Akin has said he opposes most abortions, and said in the interview that if a woman is raped, her body "has ways to shut that whole thing down."

Akin has served six terms and has said he's Missouri's most conservative congressman. He's running against Democratic Sen. Claire McCaskill. McCaskill's campaign said Sunday that "Akin's record is riddled with policies and votes that hurt women."

Akin said Sunday the punishment for rape should be focused on the rapist and not "attacking the child."

Akin was interviewed on KTVI's The Jaco Report, and also talked about numerous campaign issues, such as voter ID laws, the economy and Medicare.

The interview was conducted earlier in the week.

Akin spokesman Steve Taylor declined to comment Sunday, saying he had not yet seen the interview. McCaskill, who is seeking a second term, said she found the comments "offensive."

"It is beyond comprehension that someone can be so ignorant about the emotional and physical trauma brought on by rape," McCaskill said. "The ideas that Todd Akin has expressed about the serious crime of rape and the impact on its victims are offensive."

Aleppo, Syria. Battle with anti-Assad rebels slows for Muslim holiday

A brief lull in fighting for a Muslim holiday Sunday allowed residents of Aleppo to take stock of their losses after three weeks of intense battles left many in Syria's largest city strapped for cash, separated from loved ones and scared of more violence ahead.

In the capital Damascus, President Bashar Assad prayed at a mosque in his first appearance in public since a bomb attack killed four of his top security advisers on July 18.

Thousands across the country marched against Assad in mosques and cemeteries after special dawn prayers marking the start of the three-day Eid al-Fitr holiday, which caps the holy month of Ramadan. The holiday — usually a joyful time to remember the dead, dress up in new clothes and visit family — followed a particularly bloody Ramadan when fighting erupted in Syria's two largest cities, bringing large civilian populations under fire and causing a spike in the death toll.

The government has still not managed to defeat the rebels. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

London. Assange makes first public appearance since seeking refuge

WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange appears at a window of the Ecuadorian embassy in central London on Sunday. SANG TAN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange urged President Barack Obama to end a so-called "witch hunt" against his secret-spilling website, appearing in public Sunday for the first time since he took refuge two months ago inside Ecuador's Embassy in London to avoid extradition to Sweden on sex crimes allegations.

The 41-year-old Australian, who has fought for two years against efforts to send him to Sweden for questioning over alleged sexual misconduct against two women, addressed several hundred supporters and reporters as he spoke from the small balcony of Ecuador's mission, watched by dozens of British police.

Ecuador's President Rafael Correa on Thursday granted Assange asylum and he remains out of reach of British authorities while he is inside the country's embassy. Britain insists that if he steps outside, he will be detained and sent to Sweden, as by law it must meet the obligations of a European arrest warrant.

Praising Correa, Assange said "a courageous Latin American nation took a stand for justice," in offering him sanctuary, but did not refer to the Swedish allegations against him. Instead, he attempted to shift attention to what he claims are preparations in the U.S. to punish him for the publication by WikiLeaks of a trove of American diplomatic and military secrets.

Assange and his supporters claim the Swedish case is merely the opening gambit in a Washington-orchestrated plot to make him stand trial in the U.S. — something disputed by both Swedish authorities and the women involved.

One man's battle to breastfeed

Outdated attitudes?
Transgender dad was turned down as a group leader for a breastfeeding advocacy group

Quoted

"This has made us all stop and think. This is the first time in 55 years (of LLLC history) this question has come up."

Fiona Audy, chair of the board of directors, La Leche League Canada, regarding MacDonald's request to be a breastfeeding advocate group leader

Trevor MacDonald, a 27-year-old stay-at-home parent from Winnipeg, is a transgender man who identifies as a dad. He loves breastfeeding, and has been trying to become a group leader with advocacy organization La Leche League Canada in order to coach LGBTQ members. CONTRIBUTED

Trevor MacDonald, a slim man with short silky, dark brown hair, a radiant smile sandwiched between a wispy moustache and goatee, sits bare-chested in a leafy Toronto garden, his infant son sucking gently on his tiny left breast.

In the photo, shot on a recent visit to the city from his Winnipeg home, Trevor blissfully cradles the boy, contentment visible in his features. This is a proud papa breastfeeding his 16-month-old child, just as he has done many times before.

Trevor, a 27-year-old stay-at-home parent, loves fatherhood and, as a transgender man, identifies as a dad. And he loves breastfeeding, owing his confidence and comfort nursing to his La Leche League Canada (LLLC) motherhood support group in Winnipeg.

In early June Trevor wrote a letter to LLLC — an affiliate of the influential international mother-to-mother breastfeeding advocacy group — asking what it would take to become a group leader. He wanted to coach LGBTQ members and those who struggle, like he did, to breastfeed after chest reduction surgery.

LLLC rejected the request seven weeks later, citing an 18-year-old policy: "Since an LLLC leader is a mother who breastfed a baby, a man cannot become an LLLC leader," the organization wrote in its reply, which is posted on Trevor's blog, Milk Junkies.

"You told me that you do not identify as a mother," LLLC continued. "You are your baby's father. According to LLL philosophy the roles of mothers and fathers are not interchangeable. I think that this would make it difficult for you to represent LLL philosophy."

Not interchangeable. Those words resonate strangely to a transgender man. For Trevor, who said he was "disappointed" by LLLC's refusal, the terms motherhood and fatherhood are, at best, quaint. "First and foremost I identify as a parent," Trevor said.

"I suppose I use the term (fatherhood) because it's what we have going in our society, not because I think it's fantastic or I think it's really accurate."

Trevor uses a supplemental nursing system: a bottle with a long, narrow tube filled with milk purchased online from donors. He credits LLLC with helping Jacob suck simultaneously from his father's breast and the tube. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Northern Gateway. Budget cuts delay pipeline risk-assessment research

While Prime Minister Stephen Harper says the fate of Enbridge's proposed pipeline from the Alberta oilsands to tankers on the British Columbia coast will be based on science and not politics, documents show some of that science isn't forthcoming.

And critics say there is no time for the science to be completed before a federal deadline for the environmental assessment currently underway.

Documents filed with the National Energy Board show the environmental review panel studying the Northern Gateway project asked Fisheries and Oceans Canada for risk assessments for the bodies of water the proposed pipeline will cross. The pipeline is to traverse nearly 1,000 streams and rivers in the upper Fraser, Skeena and Kitimat watersheds.

The department didn't have them.

"As DFO has not conducted a complete review of all proposed crossings, we are unable to submit a comprehensive list as requested; however, this work will continue and, should the project be approved, our review will continue into the regulatory permitting phase," DFO wrote in a five-page letter dated June 6, 2012.

All but five of B.C.'s fisheries field offices will be cut as part of a $79 million — 5.8 per cent — cut to the department's operational budget, including the offices in Prince George and Smithers that would have had the lead in monitoring pipeline effects.

"I don't know what they're thinking. I don't know where their mind is. It's greediness," says Rankin, 50, a mother of one who helps support cousins in Jamaica.

Rankin will speak at a demonstration led by the United Food and Commercial Workers Union on Wednesday in front of Target's Canadian headquarters in Mississauga, Ont.

Two girls sit on a lakeside dock, about 200 metres from the collapsed Algo Centre Mall, in Elliot Lake, Ont., on Tuesday. Elliot Lake braces for winter without mall

Big loss. For the small Ontario town, the Algo Centre Mall was far more than just a shopping centre

The days are still long and warm but winter is on the minds of many residents of Elliot Lake, a community nestled among the rugged beauty of rocks, forests and lakes of northern Ontario — known now across Canada as the town whose mall collapsed.

Now the remains of the Algo Centre Mall stand as mute evidence of the June disaster that has robbed the town of its main gathering place.

"People have nowhere to go — that was their favourite place to be," said Melanie Lafontaine, who works just down the road. "They liked to hang out there in the mall. That's just how people were."

It's a refrain heard across the town of about 13,500 people as they try to come to grips with the loss of a building that was so much more than just another shopping centre.

The mall provided warmth in winter, cooling in summer. A spot to socialize, have a coffee, get some exercise, and shop, all in one place. Sixty per cent of the town's retail space was in the mall — 18 stores, nine government offices, and the library. All gone.

Many residents are on fixed income, unable to drive or bear the cost of getting to other communities to shop. Sudbury, the nearest city, is more than two hours away.

Winter is already being felt as parents prepare to send children back to school. But with the disappearance of retailers like Zellers and Dollarama, there's no longer a handy place to buy necessary gear like warm hats and mittens.

Capt. Pamela Stanger, with the Salvation Army, said she's already seen an increase in need for both the drop-in centre and thrift store the organization runs.

The mall, she said, was a place to congregate and exercise daily, especially in winter when temperatures plummet and snowdrifts rise.

"They need a place where they can afford to go to hang out," she said.

Judicial inquiry

- Last week, judicial inquiry commissioner Paul Belanger and his lawyers spent several days listening to residents' concerns about what happened and what's to come.
- The inquiry into the collapse and the emergency response is due to begin formal hearings likely in January.
- One of the lawyers, Bruce Carr-Harris, said the probe should offer some comfort to the community — at least by answering questions people have about a tragedy that has become so personal.

Ecuador offers subsidized fuel for international flights

Ecuador's president is offering a temptation for airlines that schedule routes to his country: cheap fuel.

Rafael Correa says the government will offer a 40 per cent reduction in fuel prices for direct routes to and from major cities.

He said the benefit would last for five years and airlines would have to promise to fly at least three times a week.

Correa says the aim is to improve connections, productivity and tourism in the country. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Heineken raises its bid for APB to nearly $4.5 billion

Dutch brewer Heineken NV has raised its bid for a controlling stake in Tiger Beer maker Asia Pacific Breweries to $4.47 billion US, hoping to ward off a rival bid.

Singapore conglomerate Fraser and Neave agreed early Saturday to sell its 39.7 per cent stake in APB to Heineken, which would give the Dutch brewer 81.6 per cent of APB. Heineken's new bid is 53 Singapore dollars ($42.31), but it covers Fraser and Neave's whole stake.

HOW WE CRASHED IN 2011

URBAN COMPASS
Steve Collins
ottawa@metronews.ca

Where are you most likely to crack up your car in Ottawa?

According to annual statistics released Friday by the city, the answer in 2011 was the Riverside Drive and Hunt Club Road intersection. This desolate, multi-laned crossing in the south end was rated Ottawa's most dangerous for the second year in a row, with 53 collisions, up from 43 last year.

The rest of the top 10, in order of descending levels of carnage, were: Belfast Road at St. Laurent Boulevard (32), Baseline Road at Woodroffe Avenue (31), Catherine Street at Kent Street (30), Walkley Road at Hawthorne Avenue (30), Prince of Wales Drive at West Hunt Club Road (30), Blair Road at Blair Ramp 36 (29), Clyde Avenue at Merivale Road (29), Industrial Avenue at St. Laurent Boulevard (29), Baseline Road at Greenbank Road (28), and Beechwood Avenue at Crichton Street (28).

These numbers might suggest the need for an immediate re-engineering of the Terrible Ten, cranked-up enforcement in the area, signs warning motorists of their elevated risk and maybe even a campaign advising them to avoid the area if at all possible.

Top 10 amount to 2 per cent

These top 10 trouble spots, while they did more dirty business than any other signalled intersections in the city, collectively accounted for only 349 of last year's 15,295 collisions. That's a smidge over two per cent.

Except they really don't. These top ten trouble spots, while they did more dirty business than any other signalled intersections in the city, collectively accounted for only 349 of last year's 15,295 collisions. That's a smidge over two per cent.

Not a single one of the 25 people who died in a collision last year did so at any of these ten intersections, and only two crashes there resulted in anyone going to hospital. The injury count citywide, meanwhile, was 3,690.

The publication of this annual 'red zone' of high-collision sites, while it makes interesting reading, might actually serve as a distraction from more important factors, like, well, distraction itself.

Driver distraction, whether from the cellphone, the kids in the backseat or just an ill-timed lapse in attention, was confirmed in 14 per cent of road injuries and fatalities here between 2005 and 2009, according to police figures. The cops estimate it's probably at least partially to blame in a third of cases overall, particularly in single-vehicle accidents.

Also more telling than where an accident occurs is who's involved. Young drivers (aged 16-24) figured in 26 per cent of collisions in which someone was hurt or killed, while accidents involving drivers over 64 accounted for six per cent. Vulnerable road users — that's anyone outside a car or truck — counted for 43 per cent of accidents causing injury or death, with pedestrians out front at 25 per cent and cyclists and motorcyclists accounting for nine per cent each.

The single biggest risk factor, according to the police numbers, is aggressive driving, which figured in 49 per cent of traffic injuries and deaths. This includes excessive speed.

New York City last year logged its lowest number of road fatalities in a century, and a 40 per cent drop from 2001. This has coincided with aggressive ticketing for infractions like driving while texting and failure to wear seatbelts but also, notably, a clampdown on speed.

A public education campaign there relentlessly drove home the statistic that a pedestrian hit at the city speed limit of 48 km/h will survive 80 per cent of the time. At 64 km/h that chance drops to 30 per cent. They're also increasing the number of designated "slow-zones," where the limit is 32 km/h. A pedestrian's about 95 per cent likely to survive a hit at that speed.

Ottawa's Strategic Road Safety Plan, instead of setting an acceptable target number of traffic fatalities like its earlier policy, recognizes that one is too many and simply calls for reductions "towards zero."

We moved in the right direction last year. Even though the number of collisions rose at roughly the same rate as the number of new cars and drivers on the road, injuries dropped and so did deaths — from 38 to 25.

This is much more important information than the top ten intersections for fender-benders.

Premium Rush opens on Friday. HANDOUT

Stars get genuine Rush out of making bike film

Dangerous shoots. Joseph Gordon-Levitt and Dania Ramirez talk about the perils of playing bicycle messengers in NYC

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Joseph Gordon-Levitt and Dania Ramirez got a hell of a workout and a detailed tour of New York City making Premium Rush, in which they play fast-moving bike messengers. Metro sat down with the stars to talk about filming in the city and how dangerous even pretending to be a bike messenger can be — and to nitpick some geographical inconsistencies in the film.

Joe, you actually went through a cab's windshield while filming. Were there any other particularly close calls or dangerous moments for either of you?

Dania Ramirez: There was one time where I had to do a take where I had to jump the curb to get back on the sidewalk, and this UPS truck just decided to come pull out of nowhere right in front of me, and I had to turn my bike and skid and the whole nine. Every single day we filmed the movie, it was always in the back of my mind. "I hope I don't fall today." Because I fell so many times (laughs).

It can be tricky making a movie in New York, worrying about continuity issues when you turn corners.

Joseph Gordon-Levitt: Actually, the movie's really good about that. It's pretty accurate... I'm trying to think if there were any.

Well, the 1 Train doesn't actually go above ground south of Columbia University.

JGL: And he would be going south. That's right, that's right. We did. You're totally right. We shot that chase scene up in, like, the high 130s. But it looked awesome. I guess I wasn't worried about that. I just got done shooting a movie where Gotham City is made up of L.A., Pittsburgh, New York and parts of outside London. So to me if it's seamless in the movie, it doesn't bother me.

How was the experience of shooting on campus at Columbia, your alma mater?

JGL: It was a trip, man, because we shot in 2010, which is basically exactly 10 years after I arrived as a freshman and was living in (the dorm) John Jay, so yeah. It's just a bizarre thing to make it back 10 years later. It was the first time I had shot on campus.

In what parts of the city were you particularly excited to film?

DR: I was looking forward to riding around Chinatown. I just think on film it's so interesting to watch that part of the city.

JGL: I liked shooting uptown, actually, even if it might be a little inconsistent (laughs). Because just that part of town is maybe a little lesser known, and it is so pretty — maybe not pretty in the sense of peaceful or whatever, but it's a really visually striking part of town with the train up there. And it's a part of town that I spent a fair amount of time in because I went to school up there and lived in Harlem for a year and a half.

Have either of you seen 1986 Kevin Bacon film Quicksilver before?

DR: I've had so many people come up to me and actually tell me about it.

JGL: Especially people who are into bikes, I've found. "Oh, so you're doing Quicksilver." It's like, I guess I've got to see this movie. S—, sorry. I still haven't seen it. I've been told about it a lot. I still haven't watched it.

DR: At this point I kind of don't even want to (laughs).

Married to Jonas. Singing brother gets domesticated

Viewers who tune into Kevin Jonas' new reality show with his wife, Danielle, will see a different side of the 24-year-old singer.

On Married to Jonas, Kevin jokes about sex and squabbles with Danielle. The show, which premiered Sunday on E! (10 p.m. EDT), isn't about the Jonas brother who wore a purity ring and seemed too good to be true. This time, he seems more relatable.

Kevin says he viewed the show, produced by Ryan Seacrest Productions, as an opportunity to show the public that he and Danielle are a normal couple.

"Doing a show like this, you kind of have to take it in stride, and we looked at it as an opportunity to show who we are as a couple without them making that decision for us," he laughed during a recent interview.

Danielle, 25, jokes the one thing that viewers will be surprised to see about her husband is "how messy Kevin is."

And unlike Jessica Simpson and Nick Lachey and Jon and Kate Gosselin, Kevin and Danielle say filming the show didn't blow them apart but made their relationship stronger.

"We get to talk so much about things you might put aside and not want to bring up ... and we talk through things more instead of yelling," she said.

The show also follows Kevin and his brothers Nick and Joe as they go back to the studio as the Jonas Brothers. The Jonas Brothers announced Friday that after three years, they will return to the stage for a one-night performance at Radio City Music Hall on Oct. 11.

Van Damme doesn't pull any punches

Expendables 2. The Muscles From Brussels talks about working with his heroes and making fight scenes seem more real

Jean Claude Van Damme plays the bad guy in Expendables 2. HANDOUT

He's probably thrown just as many cinematic punches and triggered an equal number of onscreen shootouts and explosions as his counterparts, but there was a little bit of the fanboy in Jean Claude Van Damme when he talked about appearing in The Expendables 2 alongside some of Hollywood's greatest action heroes.

"They're my heroes from the past," Van Damme said in an interview Friday to promote the new action blockbuster.

"Even today, they're still my heroes. Rambo, Rocky, Terminator, Conan, Lone Wolf — I grew up with those movies."

The Expendables 2, which opened Friday in Canada, brings together many of the stars of the heyday of action pictures — Sylvester Stallone, Bruce Willis, Chuck Norris, Arnold Schwarzenegger, Dolph Lundgren, Jet Li and Jason Statham.

The plot revolves around the recovery of weapons-grade plutonium from bad guys led by Van Damme's character, appropriately named Vilain, although the story could easily be summed up in one of the commands from Stallone's character in the movie — "Track 'em, find 'em, kill 'em."

Bullets fly! Explosions explode! Testosterone flows like a river!

Van Damme, his famed Muscles From Brussels still clearly visible in a tight T-shirt at age 51, enjoyed playing the bad guy.

"It was cool, it was great," said the former kickboxing star. "I was able to amplify the acting."

He focused on Vilain's ruthlessness despite the comedic elements of the film because he knew he couldn't be a carbon copy of his co-stars. "I've got to stay a little different from the pack," he explained. "I have to fulfil more in the sense of being on the other side."

Van Damme had turned down an offer to be in the first The Expendables because he said he was tied up on another project and was leery about committing because Stallone hadn't finished the script.

But Stallone won him over for the sequel.

He enjoyed working with Stallone, saying he was receptive to input.

"If you have a good idea with Stallone, he likes to listen. He's a cool guy."

While the movie has a lot of computer-generated effects, Van Damme said there were none when the punches were thrown.

"When you do a real move, a physical move, you can see your veins bulging and all that stuff." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Realism's cost

Older films like his own Bloodsport from 1986, Stallone's prizefighting Rocky series and even the old Tarzan movies had to flex some real muscle to achieve their punch, he said, and Van Damme suggested that added to the movie experience. But this kind of realism comes at a cost as they found out.

- Real dangers. Realism came with a price on The Expendables 2, which is dedicated to the memory of stuntman Kun Liu, who was killed during filming. His family is suing Millennium Films and the movie's stunt co-ordinator. Van Damme, who trains several times a week and eats lots of vegetables to stay in shape, acknowledged the risks taken by stunt people in films.

Brothers reuniting for another album

After three years of pursuing solo projects, the Jonas Brothers are getting back together — for one night at least. The three brothers will be hitting New York's Radio City Music Hall on October 11 in the midst of work on their first album in nearly four years, according to Us Weekly. "We know it's time to come back and do another album," eldest brother Kevin Jonas says. "It's time. We need to be back on the road together."

Rick Ross for prez? Why not

The election cycle tends to bring out the usual celebrities touting their causes and endorsements, from Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie (the legalization of gay marriage) to Kid Rock (something indiscernible about freedom and 'merica).

We're not sure what it says about us, you or shining seas, but Rick Ross' rundown of the heavy-hitter issues in Rolling Stone is about as well-reasoned and coherent as you'll hear in any debate:

On the medicinal properties of marijuana
"I call it green caviar. It's like a short vacation — it helps me chill out. And people really love it when I chill out, because I can really be a d—head."

On gun control
"I think we all have a right to bear arms, whichever amendment that is."

On the place of religion in schools
"They wanted me to learn the Ten Commandments. I told them I didn't really have time for that right now,"

On gay marriage and free speech
"Chick-fil-A obviously took their stand. That's their right — the same way the pro-gay people are taking their stand. I believe everybody got the right to live their own life the way they want to."

My daughter, 4, still wants the stroller. Is that odd?

Debate. I don't care if it's considered too old, says our Mommyish writer, who says it's easier for her child

LINDSAY CROSS
mommyish.com

How old is too old for a stroller? ISTOCK IMAGES

There are a lot of people who don't like strollers. They're big. They get in the way of everything. They are impossible to manoeuvre through a doorway without assistance. They're expensive for no real reason. Man, strollers suck. But I still use one on day trips with my four-year-old.

First, I guess I should backtrack on strollers sucking. It's really not that the strollers themselves are to blame. There are people with strollers who suck. There are actually people everywhere who suck, whether they're pushing around a child in a carriage-like contraption or not.

You just notice that the people with strollers suck more because they're easier to pick out of a crowd. What with their behemoth of a baby-cart and all. But believe it or not, there are other kinds of people out there pushing strollers.

Although plenty of people wonder why I still use a stroller or wagon at all. My daughter is four years old. She can walk just fine. She probably runs faster than I do, no matter how little those legs are. Shouldn't she be able to walk on her own?

I've gotten plenty of looks when I whip out the stroller for a longer zoo trip or a big day of shopping. Amusement parks, fairs and festivals are all appropriate times for me to lug out my stroller, but some question why it's necessary.

The truth is that my daughter still likes her stroller. And on a really long day when she's likely to get tired and frustrated, I really like her stroller as well.

A four-year-old can obviously walk around on her own. She can even walk around for hours on end when the situation calls for it. We go hiking and she walks miles with no problem. So if she really needed to walk around the zoo all day long, I'm sure she could.

However, when we have full-day trips, little kids just don't have the stamina of adults. Especially in the heat, our little girl gets worn out after a while.

I like to think I'm actually saving people from the possibilities of a moody child throwing a tantrum. Tantrums don't happen for us when our tuckered-out little one can take a minute in her stroller and take a break.

My daughter gets plenty of movement and exercise on a day-to-day basis. I don't need to test her endurance on a day at an amusement park.

Helping teenagers deal with peer pressure

With the teen years comes more independence — but so much freedom can leave room for students to be pressured into doing what they normally wouldn't.

Dr. Philip R. Herschman, chief clinical officer for CRC Health Group, the largest provider of addiction treatment in the U.S., teaches us how you can help your teen avoid those types of situations.

Start before college

"It all starts before that young adult moves into college. (If) that child is raised with a good value system and has learned how to make decisions through a normal maturational process, good parenting will instill a good value system. A good value system will lead to good decision-making."

Plan for the situation

"I have children, and when they move to a college setting I'll talk to them about it prior to them getting in that setting and say, 'These are the kinds of things that you might be faced with. If you are, how would you respond? Let's think about it now and plan for it so that when it happens, it's much easier to deal with.'"

Have them offer alternatives

"(They can) say, 'It's just not something I want to do, but I'd love to go to a movie with you later' or 'I'm sorry, drinking is not something I want to do. I'm happy to be your designated driver and go out and have fun with you.'"

Teach them to be firm

"That's why practicing ahead of time is helpful. (Tell them) you've got to be clear. You've got to look somebody in the eye and say, 'No.'"

Discourage judgments

"Don't (have your kids) tell them they're bad for drinking. That will end relationships."

Talk about safe dating

"(A) first date shouldn't be, 'Let's meet at his house for dinner' but 'Let's go have dinner in a public place.' You have to know somebody before you put yourself in a situation where it's difficult to exit."

A good value system will lead to good decision-making. ISTOCK IMAGES

Let go

"At some point, you've got to trust your kids to make the right decisions. You can't sit on their shoulders the whole time." METRO NEW YORK

Kick your side salad up a notch with citrusy kale

Ingredients

- 6-8 handfuls of kale (baby kale that is organic and pre-washed if possible)
- 3/4 cup walnuts
- 2 small oranges sliced

Dressing:
- 1/3 cup sesame or extra-virgin olive oil
- 1/2 cup brown rice vinegar
- 4 tbsp orange (naturally) flavoured Omega 3 fish oil (or hemp or flax oil)
- 1/2 cup fresh mint
- Fresh juice from 1 orange
- 2 tbsp orange rind

Orange Infused Walnut Kale Salad

This recipe makes four servings. NEWS CANADA

As summer comes to a close, families, neighbours and friends will be hosting a lot of get-togethers and feeding the masses. You're bound to see the usual spread of hamburgers, chips and soda pop.

But if you'd like to step it up and mix in an original, healthy and tasty dish that offers your guests a megawatt dose of bio-available minerals, the Canadian Health Food Association has the recipe to do just that. You can find the ingredients at any natural health retailer, or visit chfa.ca.

1. Place all dressing ingredients into a food processor and blend until the mint is completely chopped up, about 30 seconds. Place your leafy greens into a large bowl and toss with the dressing. Sprinkle with walnuts and orange slices.

Garlicky Grilled Kale. Perfect as a side, in stir-fries or tossed with pasta

Ingredients

- 1 tbsp garlic powder
- 1 tbsp smoked paprika
- 1/2 tbsp ground cumin
- 1/2 tbsp kosher salt
- 1/2 tsp ground black pepper
- 1 large bunch kale
- 2 tbsp olive oil

1. Heat a grill to medium-high. Line a heavy baking sheet with foil, or use a disposable foil baking sheet. Coat the foil or baking sheet with cooking spray.

2. In a small bowl, mix together the garlic powder, smoked paprika, cumin, salt and pepper. Set aside.

3. Trim off and discard the thick stems from the kale. Coarsely chop the kale leaves, aiming for pieces about 2 to 3 inches. Place the chopped kale in a large bowl, then drizzle it with the oil. Use your hands to toss the kale to coat evenly with the oil. Sprinkle half of the seasoning mixture over the kale, then toss again. Sprinkle the remaining seasoning and toss again.

4. Spread the kale in an even layer on the prepared baking sheet. Place the baking sheet directly on the grill and cook with the grill covered for 7 minutes, or until the kale is crisp and begins to brown. Serve immediately.

Turn nutritional powerhouse into a cheesy, crunchy snack

Ingredients

- 1 large bunch fresh kale
- 250 ml (1 cup) walnut pieces
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) shredded extra old cheddar cheese
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) Dijon mustard
- 75 ml (1/3 cup) water

A nutritious alternative, these scrumptious kale chips offer just the right amount of comfort and crunch. The combination of nutrition-packed kale and antioxidant-rich walnuts, spiced up with mustard and aged cheddar cheese make this a great snack that is also good for you.

1. Tear kale leaves into bite-sized pieces and remove ribs. Wash and dry leaves thoroughly and set aside.

2. In a food processor, combine walnuts, cheddar, Dijon and water and pulse into a paste. Transfer paste to a large mixing bowl and add kale leaves, tossing to coat evenly. Remove large clumps from leaves or spread out on leaves. (Do not apply too much walnut mixture on the kale leaves as this will prevent even drying.)

Cheesy Kale Chips

This recipe makes about 6 cups. THE CANADIAN PRESS

3. On parchment-lined baking sheets, place a single layer of kale leaves a finger-width apart. Bake one sheet at a time on the centre oven rack for 15 to 20 minutes until crisp. (Do not let the chips brown as they will taste bitter.)

4. Chips will keep in air-tight container for up to one week.

Mary Brown's CEO Greg Roberts on success, humility and chicken

Path to success. Entrepreneur accountant explored several avenues of business before sinking his teeth into successful franchise

THE IN-CREDIBILITY FACTOR
Teresa Kruze
life@metronews.ca

Greg Roberts grew up on Triton, a little island off the coast of Newfoundland, but as a young boy he had big dreams.

After graduating with a degree and becoming a chartered accountant, he acquired a gas station and restaurant; then a pharmacy. Two pizza franchises and real estate ventures followed.

But Greg had his eye on the big prize. When the franchise rights for Mary Brown's Famous Chicken and Taters became available, he mortgaged everything he had to buy the brand.

"At the time I didn't think it was a gamble because I knew the business and knew it had a lot of potential"

Today, Roberts has close to 100 franchises in Canada, 1,250 employees, a flagship store in South America and hundreds of international franchises in the planning stages.

"All in 14 years. It feels like 40," Roberts says with a laugh.

His advice?

"Work hard. Be candid. Listen to everyone and make the right decisions. At the end of the day I don't want to be the richest man in the cemetery. I just want to be known as a good person and an even better family man."

Canadians were first introduced to Mary Brown's in Newfoundland in 1969.

Five steps

1. You need a great idea and an even better plan to make it happen.
2. Surround yourself with great people that are as passionate as you and then listen to them.
3. Never become arrogant and believe you know it all.
4. Get a great education and keep on learning and taking courses.
5. Never forget where you're from and never ask someone to do something you wouldn't do yourself.

Giving your child guidance on their first day of school

The next step. Helping your kid become familiar with their new environment will make the transition smoother for both child and parent

LINDA CLARKE
Metro New York

The first day at school isn't what it used to be. These days, by the time most children start formal education they're relatively comfortable with separation from the home and parent, says Jayne Singer, the clinical director of the Child and Parent Program at Boston Children's Hospital.

"Children who have had high-quality day care or preschool make a better transition to school both emotionally and socially," she says.

Still, even leaving a private play-based preschool to go to a public school is a big transition, but there's a lot parents can do to ease a child's stress with any environmental change. When it comes to easing anxiety, familiarity breeds comfort.

"Give the child guidance; show them pictures of their new classroom or school. A lot of schools have the good sense to hold open-houses or have a welcome visit. Visit the school, visit the playground. Show them the classroom and where they will play. The sense of familiarity will ease anxiety."

"Also," adds Singer, "younger children do well with concrete reminders about the passage of time. Get a calendar and mark off the days until school starts. Turn it into a craft project. Say, make a flower and add a petal for each day."

One thing parents should watch for is transferring their anxiety. "Parents shouldn't assume a child is anxious or feels separation. Don't ask, 'Are you scared?' Let the child bring it up and if they do, say, 'Of course you are. I feel nervous when I do something new.'"

Parents should also get ready in advance

"Have a conversation with personnel at the school so you are prepared for the environment," says Singer.

"The more parents know about the school, the more authentic they are in offering guidance to the child. Tell your child they will have a chance to play, they will have a place to draw and paint. Give them concrete examples of what is there. Give them a vision of the classroom as a kind and supportive place."

A child's first day at school can be much easier if they have a good idea of what they're walking into. ISTOCK

Post-secondary social transition can come with mixed feelings

All grown up? Pending independence can be exciting for teens, but it can also bring anxiety

One of the major transitions many young adults make is the shift from high school to college life. Gone are the comforts of home, the security of past friendships and a routine existence. Instead, the college experience puts new students in an entirely new social setting with unrestrained freedom. This monumental change in lifestyle is one that may make some incoming students nervous.

"I would say, first and foremost, there's anxiety. There's fear," says mental health counsellor Kelly Shanley. "There's also the very positive emotions — happiness, joy, excitement, anticipation of being independent for the first time."

"With everything being online nowadays, I think people find before they even get to the school because they're already on Facebook — that they'll go on and just become friends with people that are similar ages and similar backgrounds, whatever their majors are."

However, Shanley warns that too much of a good thing exists if digital friendships overshadow interpersonal relationships. This is especially true in the first few weeks, when most people don't have established friendships and it's perfectly fine to introduce yourself and be friendly to as many people as possible. Shanley says that once students are on campus, getting out and meeting people is critical to social development. She also adds that early on, colleges aim to promote these interactions.

"For example, some dorms have different mixers, meet-and-greets, ways for people to get out," Shanley says. After that, students should seek out peers with similar interests. METRO

New students at post-secondary institutions should force themselves to meet new people. ISTOCK

CONSIDER A CAREER AS A PARALEGAL

Did you know that to practice as a Paralegal in Ontario you must be licensed by the Law Society of Upper Canada (LSUC)? In order to write the LSUC licensing exam,you must graduate from a program of study accredited by LSUC.

Rangers chase Alvarez en route to rout of Jays

MLB. Struggling Toronto offence held to six runs over weekend series against Texas

Henderson Alvarez pitched with a heavy heart Sunday.

The Toronto Blue Jays starter had been told of a death in the family in the morning and after an awful outing against Texas declined to speak to media.

It was small wonder. Texas defeated Toronto 11-2 after banging out 19 hits — 12 against Alvarez in 4 1/3 innings — to win the rubber match of a three-game series.

No Blue Jays mentioned Alvarez's pain after the game — catcher Yan Gomes said he "had absolutely no idea" — but Rangers starter Matt Harrison expressed sympathy for the opposing pitcher.

"I'll say a little prayer for his family and him tonight," said Harrison. "That's pretty tough. To have that on your mind when you go out and pitch, your focus is definitely not on pitching."

Michael Young hit a three-run homer and added a two-run double for Texas, while Harrison (14-7) held Toronto to two runs and two hits, including a solo homer by Mike McCoy.

The hit total and the eight runs allowed were both career highs for Alvarez (7-11), and, by the time McCoy homered in the fifth, the Rangers had broken the game open in the top of the fifth with five runs. David Murphy added his 11th homer of the season against Chad Jenkins in the ninth.

"The Rangers came out and swung the bats aggressively, especially on first-pitch fastballs," Blue Jays manager John Farrell said. "I didn't think he used his secondary stuff enough, particularly as they started to be aggressive early in the counts. There was still first-pitch fastball approach that they took advantage of."

After the game Gomes was returned to triple-A Las Vegas, likely to make room for catcher Yorvit Torrealba who completed his four-game stint with double-A New Hampshire on Sunday. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Offensive woes

Bautista, Lawrie to take at-bats in the minors

The good news for the Blue Jays is that Jose Bautista and Brett Lawrie will be back in the lineup Monday. The bad news, however, is that they're back in the lineup of the Gulf Coast League Blue Jays.

The Jays managed just two hits and two runs in the finale with the Rangers, dropping to nine games below .500. In the 21 games the Jays have played since July 29, without Bautista and catcher J.P. Arencibia and with a hobbled Brett Lawrie and Adam Lind, they are 0-12 when they score two runs or less. It's the fact that they've scored two or less in 12 of 21.

In addition, the Jays since July 29 have scored a total of just 59 runs, an average of less than three per game, with 16 home runs and a .212 team batting average.

MLB. Cabrera associate tried fabricating defence against drug test: Report

An associate of San Francisco Giants all-star Melky Cabrera purchased a website and attempted to create evidence to support a claim that the outfielder inadvertently took the substance that caused a positive drug test, the New York Daily News reported Sunday.

Baseball officials uncovered the scheme as Cabrera prepared his case to challenge the test. Cabrera's grievance then was dropped, and Major League Baseball announced a 50-game suspension Wednesday.

A team of six to seven investigators from MLB uncovered the plan, a baseball official familiar with the probe said Sunday. The person spoke on condition of anonymity because MLB didn't authorize anyone to discuss the matter publicly.

Cabrera tested positive for testosterone, MLB said.

Biffle wins race after Johnson's engine falters

Jimmie Johnson looked as if he had already finished the hardest work. After starting at the back of the pack, he had moved up quickly, and when he passed Brad Keselowski for the lead on lap 191 of 200, his No. 48 Chevrolet seemed to be the superior car.

Then Johnson's engine faltered with only six laps remaining at Michigan International Speedway. He lost the race — and the NASCAR Sprint Cup points lead — to Greg Biffle on Sunday. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Federer finely tuned ahead of U.S. Open

Roger Federer hits a backhanded shot against Novak Djokovic during the men's final at the Western & Southern Open tennis tournament on Sunday in Mason, Ohio. Federer won 6-0, 7-6 (7). AL BEHRMAN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Tennis. Top-ranked player again trumps Djokovic to capture title in Cincinnati and upper hand in rivalry

Roger Federer finds a lot to like about Cincinnati — the big crowds for his matches, the quiet time away from the court, the way his game seems to come together on the fast, blue courts.

Probably helps that he often takes home the trophy, too.

Make it five for Federer.

The world's top-ranked player won a record fifth Cincinnati title Sunday, dominating second-ranked Novak Djokovic in an unprecedented way at the start of a 6-0, 7-6 (7) win for the Western & Southern Open championship.

The 31-year-old Swiss star has enjoyed many of his one-week visits. None was better than the latest.

"Looking back, it's just unbelievable," Federer said. "This was probably the best week for me here in Cincinnati. I didn't lose a set. This is very sweet, no doubt about it."

Federer heads to the U.S. Open feeling healthy and fine-tuned. He skipped the Rogers Cup in Toronto last week, giving himself some time to recover from the Olympics in London.

He's also regained the upper hand against one of the players who stands in his way.

Djokovic had put together a run of three straight wins over Federer in tournament semi-finals, starting with the U.S. Open last year. Federer turned it around by beating the Serb in the semis at Wimbledon last month.

They got together in a finals match for the seventh time in their careers Sunday. They'd split the previous six, with Federer winning the only Grand Slam championship match — the U.S. Open in 2007.

Quickly, the latest one became a bit of personal history. Federer won the first set in only 20 minutes, allowing Djokovic just 10 points. It was the first time in their 28 career matches that one of them took a set 6-0. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Women's draw

In the women's final, Li Na (9) defeated Angelique Kerber (5) 1-6, 6-3, 6-1. Li recently lost to Petra Kvitova in the Rogers Cup final but kept up her strong play for her first tournament victory of the season.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
There are general, everyday risks and there are the kind of risks that only an Aries would dare take — and you'll be taking plenty today. A major Sun-Mars link means your luck is about to turn. Enjoy it!

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
The best way to improve your life is to focus your thoughts and feelings on what means most to you in this world. Forget about your ambitions and concentrate on the people who you really, truly, madly love.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
You have plenty to say for yourself but do other people understand your message? Your task today is to get across your central idea in ways that don't leave those with lesser minds feeling too confused.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
If you are having second thoughts about a commitment you made then you should be able to wriggle out of it without too much trouble. Don't make a habit of it though or your reputation will suffer.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
The recent new moon in your sign means there is no more confusion: you know exactly what you should be doing and exactly how it must be done. It's Monday and the start of a new week — so get started!

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Are you at peace with yourself? Even if you are not you will be able to find a special place of inner tranquility over the next few days — the place where nothing and no one can touch you or harm you.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
You have a great deal in common with a certain group of people and if you make the effort to spend time with them there is a lot they can teach you. Share your dream with them too — they'll like it.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You may find it hard to trust someone you work or do business with but what choice do you have? Sometimes even a Scorpio must put their doubts aside and just get on with it. You won't lose out.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
What you hear today may sound too good to be true but you would be wrong to dismiss it out of hand. An excellent Sun-Mars link indicates it's all above board – and very much in your favour.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Step back from what you are working on and look at it from a higher level. What does it mean in the greater scheme of things? If your answer is "nothing" then you should be working on something else.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Resist the temptation to make accusations, because if you start the week with a distrustful attitude it will colour your relationships for the next seven days. No one is trying to cheat you — so don't cheat yourself.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
Let your mind wander in imaginary realms. You are probably fed up with friends and colleagues and loved ones telling you to get your head out of the clouds but that's the best place for it today. Dream on. SALLY BROMPTON

Sudoku

How to play
Fill in the grid, so that every row, every column and every 3x3 box contains the digits 1-9. There is no math involved. You solve the puzzle with reasoning and logic.

1					9	2	5
	4			2		9	7
2			4					3
				5			3	9
		9				8
5	6			3
8					4			6
	7	6		9			1
	2	3	5					7
